

Jul 12, 2014. Bruce Pye was an avid swimmer and triathlete, fellow swim coach and a friend. To say he was the nicest guy you'd ever want to meet would be a complete understatement. He was a teacher who worked with autistic children. Everything he did, he did with enthusiasm and gusto. Everyplace he went, he made it a more enjoyable place to be.

From his Excel Swimming Coach Bio:

Having jumped into the swimming world at age eight, Bruce has now finally taken the leap again and entered the world of Masters swimming, first as a competitor and now as a coach. Along the way he has competed and coached high school swimming, age group level swimming, and worked with individuals of all ages and ability levels ranging from learn-to-swim up to the Junior National level. At the base of his belief is an understanding that in order for an athlete to perform at their best, they must have an enjoyable experience in what they are doing and have an understanding of what purpose each activity serves. In order to be able to provide understanding, Bruce goes to great lengths to ensure that he is staying abreast of the latest developments in training and stroke mechanics so he can pass this information along to his swimmers.

Outside the pool Bruce enjoys both road cycling and mountain biking, and is in the process of learning how to love running. Additionally, he enjoys playing basketball and is an avid reader, in particular being a fan of classical literature. He attended New York Institute of Technology majoring in computer science, SUNY Old Westbury majoring in English language literature, and Touro College for his masters in middle school general and special education. He is currently employed by Nassau BOCES working with individuals who are emotionally and behaviorally challenged.

Excel - SSTC - LITC - TRE - SRT and so many more...
His friendship touched so many of us.

Please be careful out there.
Brian Fallon
Swim. Bike. Run. Repeat as necessary.
Welcome to the Church of Briantriology!